

Professor of Medicine
Director of Sleep and Health Education Programs
Harvard Medical School/ Brigham and Women's Hospital

Harvard Medical School is seeking an outstanding clinician/teacher/scientist to serve as Professor of Medicine and Director of the Sleep and Health Education Programs in the Division of Sleep Medicine. The incumbent will be responsible for leading the effort to integrate sleep science and sleep medicine into the curriculum of the Harvard Medical School and into the graduate medical education programs at the Brigham and Women's Hospital and other Harvard-affiliated institutions. The incumbent will also participate in clinical patient care and in the teaching activities of the Division of Sleep Medicine in the Department of Medicine at Brigham and Women's Hospital and Harvard Medical School. These combined full-time activities will include directing and supervising the teaching of basic and clinical circadian and sleep disorders medicine for medical students, graduate students, postdoctoral fellows, house staff and postgraduate physicians.

Candidates for the position of Professor of Medicine are expected to be Board Certified in Sleep Medicine and possess the international stature of a research leader in the field of sleep science or sleep medicine, as evidenced by scholarly publications, scholarly accomplishments, election to scholarly societies, leadership positions in related societies, leadership positions on NIH or other federal agencies in the field of sleep science or sleep medicine, service as editor or on the editorial boards of respected journals in the field of sleep science or sleep medicine, and participation on committees and review boards. He or she should also have had experience directing a competitive basic or clinical research program in sleep science or sleep medicine, and the administrative skills to direct an education program in sleep medicine.

Interested candidates should send a letter of interest, curriculum vitae, and contact information for three references in hard copy and electronic format to:
