

Brigham and Women's Hospital Gastroenterology Fellowship Program Director

The Brigham and Women's Hospital (BWH) and Harvard Medical School announce a search for the Program Director of the Harvard BWH Gastroenterology Fellowship Program. The job affords the opportunity to develop and implement an educational vision for this program and curriculum that takes advantage of the rich and varied rotations available at BWH, and the affiliates.

Applicants must be Board-certified in gastroenterology. Candidates should have leadership experience and a track record of excellence in graduate medical education. The Program director will hold an academic rank at Harvard Medical School at the Instructor, Assistant or Associate Professor level will be commensurate with experience, training and achievements

Brigham and Women's Hospital/Harvard Medical School Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action Employers are actively committed to increasing the diversity of our faculty: women and members of underrepresented minority groups are therefore strongly encouraged to apply

Please respond to:

David E.Cohen, M.D., Ph.D
Brigham and Women's Hospital
75 Francis Street
Boston, MA 02115